PEARL VALLEY GOLF

3 Easy Ways to Overcome Pearl Valley's Treacherous Greenside Bunkers

1. High Greenside Bunker Lip:

The first thing to consider is how high the lip is. Higher clubhead-speed golfers can slightly open the face, but lower clubhead-speed golfers may need to keep the face more square to hit the ball far enough to escape the needed distance to reach the green. Consider that your chosen wedge, even a 56-degree, in most cases has enough loft to clear the lip, as long as you take sand and make a proper motion where you are on your forward side when you finish and avoid the inclination to fall back and incorrectly lift the ball.

2. Fried Egg in Bunker / Plugged Lie:

A fried egg looks worse than it is. When the ball is buried in the bunker, you need to engage the digging edge of your wedge rather than the bounce. To do this, focus on your setup. You still want to position your ball forward off-center if you are in a greenside bunker or need to hit the ball shorter, but what should be different is that you want to lean your upper body forward and lean the shaft as well so that the leading edge will dig. When you lean the shaft, the club will become less lofted, so you need to plan for a lower flight that will likely roll more. You may want to use your most lofted wedge to offset this.

3. Greenside Bunker — No Sand:

When you dig your feet into a bunker and realize there isn't any sand, you need to adjust so that the club does not bounce off the hard-packed sand and skull across the green. Much like the fried egg situation, you want to use the leading edge by leaning your upper body and club shaft forward toward the target. This steeper angle and digging edge will help the club dig into the sand before the ball and keep the club from bouncing off the sand.

At the first event, all participants will compete from the 25-meter tee. The goal is to play 9-holes and score 36 or lower. The desired score will allow players to move on to the 50-meter tee in the next event. The participants who do not achieve the target score will remain on the same tee for the next event. The game aims to get juniors to score from a close distance and advance further away from the green once the target score is met.
